WANTS DAMAGE MONEY OF VILLAGE

CIRCUIT COURT DETERMINES ORDINANCE INVALID

After Frederic Citizen is Found Guilty by Jury.

Growing out of a suit against Daniel McDermid, of Frederic, wherein he had been charged with a violation of the village ordinance relative to the licensing of vehicles for hire, etc., claims to the amount of $300 have been made upon our village council for alleged damages sustained.

The arrest of Mr. McDermid occurred during the week of the National Guard encampment in August by Night Watch M. Brenner.

The respondent was found guilty by a jury in Justice court. The case was appealed to Circuit court where Judge Sharpe determined that the ordinance was invalid owing to the fact that it has not been legally adopted by the village council.

Soon after the decision by Judge Sharpe, McDermid made demands upon President Hans Petersen for $150 as payment for the damages he claims to have sustained, stating so Mr. Petersen says, that if they didn't pay it, it would cost them $500 or worse similar in effect.

The following communication was received and read at the council meeting Monday night, and the village clerk ordered to refer same to the village attorney, Glen Smith.

Frederic, Mich., Oct. 30, 1915.
The Hon. President and Common Council of the village of Grayling, Michigan:

Gentlemen:

I have decided in view of the decision rendered by Judge Sharpe in Circuit court on October 14th, 1915, that the ordinance on which your Hon. Body had me arrested on August 13th, 1915, for violation of same, is invalid and not enforceable. Therefore, in view of said decision, and the fact of my being arrested, tried and falsely imprisoned for violation of same, and being deprived of my liberty, humiliated and put to very considerable expense, and inconvenience, do now apply to your Hon. Body for damages sustained by me on account of said arrest, imprisonment, inconvenience and expense; being satisfied when convicted in Justice court of the invalidity of aforesaid ordinance, that in order to protect my rights I was obliged to appeal against said conviction to a higher court to wit: The Circuit court of Crawford county, where my appeal was sustained.

In consideration of the foregoing, I must request your Hon. Body to pay me the sum of "Three hundred dollars ($300.00) as damages sustained." Await an early reply, I am,

Yours respectfully,

DAN McDERMID.

Frederic School Notes.

All the teachers are back from the institute held in Saginaw last week. With the new ideas obtained from the master teachers of the United States, now in their possession, they feel that they are well repaid for their trip.

The caste in the minstrel is waiting for more music ordered from Ohio. Katie Brown is the new organist in the eighth grade exercises.

As soon as our new basket ball arrives we will start playing.

From what Sup't. Wood said to us in a talk Monday morning, Ex-President Taft has the idea that schools in general lack discipline. Taft however has not been to Frederic, where we pride ourselves along that line, except on Hallowe'en.

Spelling and penmanship is required of everyone in the high school. The eighth grade start the study of Edgar Allan this week.

The English class of the high school is committing to memory the great speech on Patriotism by McKinley.

Raymond Brown has entered school.

Horatio Hunt is leaving school as his parents are moving to Bay City. A literary society is being organized. It is planned to have a meeting every other week.

WILL PROPAGATE WILD LIFE AT GAME PRESERVE

Game Warden Department Plans Many Improvements.

State Game Commissioner W. R. Gates has plans for an extensive improvement in the State game preserve at the Military reservation. There is only one inlet to Portage lake and this is at the Game enclosure and at this place will be constructed ponds for the propagation of wild duck, beaver, fish and other wild life. Hungarian and Ring tail pheasants are among the species of game birds that will be brought here. Under direction of A. J. Murphy, superintendent of property, Refuge, wild rice and buck wheat beds will be planted for feeding places. Mr. Murphy says that he will use his utmost endeavor to reduce the number of bird killing animals such as mink, muskrat, weasels, coon and others, thus aiding in the increase of more desirable animals and birds.

In company with J. P. McGuire livery on of State foresters, and Deputy State Game Warden R. S. Babitt, of this place a trail was made to the reservation and several photographs made of some of the animals in the refuge. The white deer have become very tame. Tari a little maneuvering good pictures were taken of the three large elk, they are exceedingly shy

but dangerous when approached too near.

Murphy is now assisting in the construction of a care-taker's house, which will be located adjoining the game closure near the village. He says that the department will construct an artificial outlet of the lake into Portage creek, a V-shaped screen to prevent fish from going down stream.

The point of the V will extend out in to the lake with a small outlet to enclose a bend up the creek to enter the lake. Murphy is experienced in propagation of wild life and will devote his entire time to this and the care of the refuge.

Concerning the Fashionable Fox Furs

Foxes will need all their cunning, and much more, if the demand for their pelts does not abate. Just now it seems that every girl wants to wear a red fox, or a white one, coiled about her neck, and a fox muff in which to embed her hands. She dines in airy gowns, but, having removed a coat, her graceful fur is retained, not because the public dining room is cold but because her fur are becoming, and fashion allows her to wear them.

White fox is in demand on evening coats in collars and deep cuffs. Or very light colors and white coats employ fox fur dyed black. It is a long, soft and rich fur but not so durable as some others.

Red fox is especially becoming to auburn-haired, fair-skinned women, and when brown eyes are added to these the effect is so good that even the fox might be reconciled to his fate, could he foresee it.

One of these natural fox sets is shown in the picture. The scarf is held in place by fastening the claws together. In the muff the head is used, but tail and claws are omitted.

Fox fur is dyed into several colors, the very dark browns and blacks being favored by the majority of women. Certain species are very high priced, and will not be cheaper. The cross fox and pointed fox are rare—a single skin from the latter is worth several hundred dollars.

Modes in Hair Dressing.

The modes in hairdressing change quite as much as the modes in millinery or clothes. Indeed we have to keep modifying our coiffure to suit the ever-changing hat shapes. When the crowns are high we must needs wear our knots on top of our heads to fit in the high crowns. When the flat-crowned shape prevails it means that the hair must be stowed away around the nape of the neck somewhere.

But though hair style changes frequently, this does not mean that we must follow them blindly and obediently regardless of how they appear on us. There is nothing which so transfigures a girl's face as the right kind of coiffure.

Two Sorts of Crepe Blouses

A plain blouse and a dressy one, both of crepe, are pictured above. They are representative styles in blouses made of crepes, which are equally well liked for daily wear and for dress occasions. Crepe Georgette is chosen for the rich-looking waist with handsome lace vest and ermine bands, while crepe de chine makes the plain blouse for ordinary service.

The plain blouse is set on to a yoke which is narrow at the back and terminates at the front, where it is brought over the shoulder. The shoulder-seams are long and the sleeves plain and almost straight. They are set into a plain cuff with overlapping end. This end is pretty shaped into a point that is extended and decorated with a fine embroidered floral spray. A small buttonhole worked in the point fastens the cuff over a round button set on the underside.

The blouse fastens at the front with small ball buttons. These are usually white or light-colored crepe. On tans and grays they are generally made in bright contrasting colors.

The collar is cut high at the back and turns over in two points at the front, where the embroidered flower design reappears. Many of the latest blouses are cut with high collars and others are worn with high collars or batiste net or organdie.

In the dresser-waist the sleeves are full and finished with a frill of fine net and a band of ermine. The front pieces are turned back, forming revers, and a vest and high collar of heavy silk lace are set in. Small jet-buttons and a band of ermine about the neck at the back and sides give a brilliant finish.

The jet buttons repeat the note of black which appears in the points of the ermine, and the lace and fur convert the blouse into a rich-looking affair conveying an atmosphere of high style.

No Material Damage.

A husky Ethiopian came into a lawyer's office and, exhibiting a scalp wound about three inches long on top of his head, wanted to know if he could "get anything for his head." In response to a query from the lawyer he explained: "Well, boss it wuz like this: Ah wuz working down by dis beach now buildin' an' a fo'-pounch which fell off de sixteenth story an' hit me smack on top da head."

"GOD FOR THE YOUNG CHILD."

There is great need that mothers study the feeding of the baby, as statistics tell us that a large proportion of little people die with no chance to fight their own way before they are two years old. To introduce solid foods into the diet of a child is a change worthy of thoughtful consideration. Children should be fed according to their weight, age and development. Solid foods should be introduced gradually after one year of age in a normal baby.

A cereal well cooked, an egg cooked and mixed with bread crumbs or milk, or gruel, making one meal a day. See that the baby feeds slowly and mastigates well. Habits of right eating may be formed now which will go with him through life. Fresh bread should never be given. Cut in squares and baked until brown, then served in milk, is a good dish and one children-like. Add a pinch of salt but no sugar to such dishes. Milk and cream should be used plentifully.

An hour before or an hour after feeding a tablespoonful or two of orange juice, pineapple juice strained, apple sauce or mashed pulp of prunes may be given.

Vegetables are now a necessity. Potatoes thoroughly baked and served with butter or cream. Asparagus, spinach and carrots, crushed fine and well-seasoned with salt and butter.

Only one vegetable daily until the age of two is reached. Meats should be given but sparingly; a tablespoonful of scraped rare beef may be mixed with the baby's potato or a bit of steak gravy may be put over it. Up to three years but little meat is given, and it should always be finely cut.

Broths of mutton, chicken or beef with rice or stale crumbs, or beef juice may be given, five ounces at a meal; beef juice being more concentrated, three ounces is sufficient.

Cereals of oatmeal, farina, barley, hominy, rice or cracked wheat, four ounces but it should be long and well cooked. Serve with a pinch of salt and plenty of milk and cream.

GOOD THINGS FOR THE TABLE.

A most delightful autumn dainty is baked pears. Wash and peel the pears and lay them in a baking dish, cover with water, butter, sugar and lemon juice, using the mixture to bathe them during the baking. Serve when brown and tender. As a vegetable to serve with meats or as a dessert with whipped cream there could be nothing more tasty.

Stuffed Pears.—Take firm pears and remove cores. Steam until tender, then fill the centers with whipped cream, mixed with chopped dates, candied cherries or nuts.

Pear Salad.—Peel nice ripe pears cut in halves, remove the core, then roll in chopped nuts, lay flat side down on head lettuce, place a large spoonful of mayonnaise at the side and serve well chilled with toasted cheese crackers.

Stuffed Green Peppers.—Cut the stem ends from six green peppers, remove white fiber and seeds, scald five minutes and drain. Mix one cupful of bread crumbs with three tablespoons of melted butter, one cupful of tuna fish, salt, a dash of lemon juice and stock to moisten slightly. Fill the peppers, place in a buttered pan with half a cupful of hot water to bake slowly half an hour. Serve with a cream sauce and triangles of buttered toast.

Creamed Oysters.—Take three dozen oysters, parboil in their own liquor until they rifle, then drain. Place a cupful of cream and half a cupful of milk in a double boiler. When the mixture is hot add a tablespoonful of butter and two of flour, well mixed, season with salt and pepper; cook until thick. Fill ramekins with this mixture and the oysters; cover with a piece or two of hard cooked egg and a spoonful of buttered crumbs. Brown in the oven. The egg may be used as a garnish on top of the browned crumbs just as it goes to the table, with a bit of parsley as a finish.

Criticism of Modern Ways.

Today the tendency is, not to endeavor to make youths strong to resist, but to try to remove all stress from them. They must not be given hard tasks at school; indeed, the cry is that children must feel that school is play. They must not be taught obedience and respect, lest they be servile. They must have much amusement. All this is dependent upon the idea that life is meant for pleasure and that work is a curse.—Dr. Charles W. Burr.

Too Hard on the Gossips.

A New York inventor has found a way of keeping everybody on a party telephone line, except the party called, from hearing a word of the conversation. But he needn't expect the company to utilize his invention. It would ruin his business.

APPETIZING FISH DISHES.

Canned fish now is such a plentiful article on the market that when fresh fish is not obtainable the tinned variety will answer fully as well.

Tuna or tunny fish is one of the most delicious of canned fish and may be served right from the can with quarters of lemon or combined in various ways to serve as salad. Filled tomatoes, stuffed with tuna, well seasoned, celery and cabbage makes a most tasty salad.

Herring Salad.—Cook salt herring 15 minutes in boiling water to cover. Drain and cool and separate into flakes. Add an equal quantity of cubes of cooked potatoes, a half cupful of chopped celery, the whites of two eggs, chopped, and a good boiled dressing. Cover with hard-cooked egg put through a ricer.

Salmon Loaf With Peas.—Season a can of salmon, add a beaten egg, a tablespoonful of lemon juice and a cupful of thick, white sauce. Steam in loaf and serve garnished with cooked peas on a platter.

Creamed Finnan Haddie.—Cook half a tablespoonful of green onion, one tablespoonful of green pepper (both chopped), with fourth of a cupful of butter, five minutes, stirring constantly.

Add four tablespoonsfuls of flour, mixed with a teaspoonful of salt, a dash of cayenne and half a teaspoonful of paprika. Then pour on gradually one cupful each of milk and cream.

Bring to the boiling point and cook two minutes. Reserve half a cupful of this sauce and to the remainder add 1½ cupfuls of flaked finnan haddie, when hot fill the center of a rice burger with the finnan haddie and pour around the reserved sauce. Garnish with canned prunes.

Salmon croquettes molded around a teaspoonful of cooked green peas and served hot with a highly seasoned sauce make another tasty dish.

Salt mackerel is delicious soaked overnight or until well refreshed then placed in the oven covered with a good cupful of thick cream and allowed to bake 20 minutes. Add salt if needed, just as it is taken up.

DO NOT SLIGHT LEFTOVERS.

Take any bits of leftover meat, put through a meat chopper, season and mix with egg, and form into cutlets, place half an almond cut lengthwise at the small end to represent the cutlet bone.

Dip in egg and fry. Place a cauliflower in the center of the dish and the cutlets around and serve. Serves with a meat sauce.

A small piece of cheese, if grated, will add flavor to any number of dishes. It is good in escalloped potato, in scalloped cabbage, adds to the flavor of milky toast and may be sprinkled over lettuce which has been dressed with French dressing. A little grated cheese added to an omelet is an improvement.

A dainty cracker to serve with a salad course is prepared by heating grated cheese on the crackers, sprinkle with salt and cayenne and then toasting in the oven.

Sour cream makes a delicious filling for cakes; add brown sugar and cook until it is hard, add nuts and beat until smooth.

Sour cream dressing, using cream, salt and a dash of cayenne served on young green onions is a dish not half well enough known.

A tablespoonful of leftover peas with a few cold potatoes will make a most appetizing salad to serve for Sunday night supper.

Small bits of bread may be used as crumbs for various dishes, as croissants, as bread puddings with fruit or custard, as filling with nuts for peppers, or baked potatoes; in fact in thousands of ways bits of bread may be utilized. Not a crumb should be wasted, even the crust tray should be emptied for the little shreds.

Creamed Oysters.—Take three dozen oysters, parboil in their own liquor until they rifle, then drain. Place a cupful of cream and half a cupful of milk in a double boiler. When the mixture is hot add a tablespoonful of butter and two of flour, well mixed, season with salt and pepper; cook until thick. Fill ramekins with this mixture and the oysters; cover with a piece or two of hard cooked egg and a spoonful of buttered crumbs. Brown in the oven. The egg may be used as a garnish on top of the browned crumbs just as it goes to the table, with a bit of parsley as a finish.

Eat Plenty of Fruit.

For its appetizing values fruit should be eaten before meals. If taken as dessert at the end of the meal fruit has its best effect from the nutritive standpoint. For its laxative properties fruit should be taken on an empty stomach, preferably soon after rising in the morning.

Only Work Brings Success.

Those who are prone to consider themselves exempt from hard work have never been known to obtain the success which real people covet. You have to keep working every minute to get anywhere. Just as soon as you stop the other fellow is bound to go ahead.

Vast Consequences.

There are purposes which God himself cannot fulfill on earth except through you, and every sin of yours is a barrier set in God's way. To be sinning, not against yourself, but against the universe; in the potty yielding to your own indolence or neglect, to be hindered of God's great ends in the world—that is what gives awfulness to every thought of sin.

To injure, to blot, ruin yourself—that may be a small matter; but to hold back the vast mechanism of creation that gives your little life significance.

The Army of Heaven

By REV. L. W. CONNELL
Supernaturalist at Mrs. Moody's
Academy of Christ.

TEXT—God's host—Gen. xii.

The angels compose the army of heaven. The captain of this host of the Lord is no other than Jesus Christ, and it was he, we think, who appeared as the angel of the Lord in the Old Testament. The multitude of those who bow to his command is suggested by the fact that in the garden of Gethsemane he might have called for twelve legions of angels and they would have been given him; they are said to number ten thousand times ten thousand and thousands of thousands.

We would speak of two instances especially in which this shining host has figured.

The first has to do with the story of Jacob. He was on his way back from Haran after an exile of twenty years.

Thoughts of meeting Esau on the morrow troubled him, for he was learning that "sin come home to roost." How beautiful to read, "And Jacob went on his way and the angels of God met him." And when Jacob saw them, he said, "This is God's host; and he is armed, caloused, falling arch, etc. Narrow, pointed, bone-bending spear.

Narrow, pointed, bone-bending spear.

He was an Expert.

There was only a glimmer of light in the hall, but the old gentleman at the head of the stairs could just discern the outlines of two figures, very close together, near the front door. "Helen!" he snapped angrily, "this is too much! It's half-past eleven, and that young man's not gone yet! Doesn't he know how to say good-night?" After a short silence there floated up the stairs to him in his daughter's voice, low, breathless, languorous: "Doesn't he know how to say good-night?" she echoed. "Oh, father, I should think he does!"

SUFFERED FOR FOUR YEARS.

Mr. J. M. Sinclair of Oliville, Tenn., writes: "I strained my back which weakened my kidneys and caused an awful bad backache and inflammation of the bladder. Later I became so much worse that I consulted a doctor, who said that I had Diabetes and that my heart was affected. I suffered

GETTING A START

By NATHANIEL C. FOWLER, Jr.

(Copyright, 1915, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

THE SOCIAL LIFE OF BUSINESS.

Business, while often hard and even cruel, does not refuse to consider the human side of life.

Thousands of captains of industries and merchant princes recognize the needs of man as well as those of trade, and encourage many forms of social intercourse among their employees, including the establishment of libraries, reading-rooms, gymnasiums, and the organization of athletic and other societies.

Exhaustive experiment has shown that healthy social life can be added to business without detriment to financial profit; and that the more employees get together, play together as well as work together, the more efficient they are likely to be.

Workers of the same grade naturally have much in common, and there is no reason why they should not enjoy one another's company in business and out of it, why they should not have a common business interest and a social acquaintanceship and friendship.

Of course business must be attended to, and any social life which interferes with the conduct of business cannot very well be tolerated; but there are forms of sociability which the well-regulated store or factory should recognize, and many of them do.

Fellow employees should be friends as well as business associates. They should enjoy one another's company at work as well as out of hours.

A hearty "Good morning," an exchange of smiles, a pleasant joke, a kind word, even during the heat of business, helps to bring the strenuousness of work to a livable level and assists rather than retards the action of business.

Get acquainted with your fellow clerks. Know something of their personal life, as well as of their business. Organize ball teams, associations for business and social betterment. Connect with the employees of similar institutions. Intermingling and interchange.

The greatest business men in the world are members of boards of trade, chambers of commerce, and other organizations. They lunch together in afraid of competition. Their priests should be emulated by the employees, who, collectively, are as strong a factor in success as are those who command them.

Let your wife come into this social and business life, if she will.

Do not draw too sharp a line between business and family.

Pass along the good things you have to others, and they will reciprocate.

The more you get together, the greater will go your accomplishment.

Remember that you alone amount to very little, that you as a part of a composite mass may hold great responsibility.

The successful man is not a hermit. He circulates rather than boards. He shakes hands with his competitors, exchanges experiences with those of similar calling. He has a normal social life, the kind that does not interfere with his business. He renders unto business all that business deserves, and does not forget there is something besides business, something which it properlyhardt with push rather than handicap trade.

Not unless you follow the directions.

"What are the directions?"

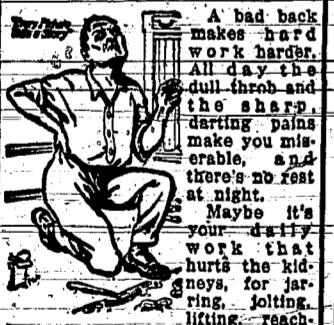

"Keep the bottle tightly corked."

The Worst Way.

"What sort of fellow is Jibworth?"

"Very impractical. He's the sort of man who would elect to take a sightseeing trip in a submarine."

Can't Do the Work

A bad back makes hard work harder. All day the dull throb and the sharp darting pains make you miserable, and there's no rest at night.

Development of Human Jaw.

The bony structure of prehistoric human jaws was of astonishing massiveness and strength. They were built strong, as if to withstand terrific violence. But when man began to be born, nature was obliged to furnish pads for them—to which circumstance Doctor Robinson attributes the origin of the heavy covering that adorns this part of the face today, beautifying its contour.

Child's Narrow Escape.

Snap stories so frequently degenerate into mere fabrications that a serious chronicler hesitates to tell of an incident such as that which W. F. Reyer, lighthouse engineer, witnessed on the Sirloin river, near Panama. The river had been swollen by the first heavy rains and at its junction with the Tigris was very swift. Five men and a child came down to the ford at Tigrera and prepared to get into a canoe for crossing. The river looked so treacherous, however, that they decided to make the crossing in parties of three.

One man, the child, a boy of four years, and the paddler man got into the canoe and put off. The first eddy caught them when they were not far from shore and upset their boat.

He seized the child and started for shore, gritted up the steep bank and made for the jungle. The child's body caught between two stalks of bamboo and while the snake was trying to pull itself through the man on the bank ran up and killed it. Two bright webs around the body of the child are probably his metamorphosis.

THE OTHER FELLOW.

Ninety-nine and nine-tenths per cent of failures, men of the never-get-there class, intentionally or unintentionally, forget themselves and think about "the other fellow."

If the other fellow is promoted, they are jealous, feel that their employer has discriminated unfairly, and that favoritism or luck is responsible for the good things which he has received.

If they make a mistake, instead of attempting to learn better, they hunt up the mistakes "the other fellow" has made and excuse themselves because he has blundered.

Many a young man, who has not been promoted or received a raise of salary, instead of analyzing himself, goes to his employer and says, "You raised Smith's salary, I think mine ought to be raised too."

The employer naturally asks him what Smith has got to do with it. Smith had his salary raised because he deserved it. Yet a proportion of them, who ought to know better, use this feeble and unbusinesslike argument.

Concerning the Fashionable Fox Furs.

Foxes will need all their cunning, and much more, if the demand for their pelts does not abate. Just now it seems that every girl wants to wear a red fox, or a white one, coiled about her neck, and a fox mud in which to embed her hands. She dines in gay gowns, but, having removed a coat, her graceful fur is retained, not because the public dining room is cold but because her furs are becoming, and fashion allows her to wear them.

White fox is in demand on evening coats in collars and deep cuffs. Or else light colors and white coats employ fox fur dyed black. It is a long, soft, and rich fur but not so durable as some others.

Red fox is especially becoming to auburn-haired, fair-skinned women, and when brown eyes are added to the effect is so good that even the fox might be reconciled to his fate, could he foresee it.

One of these natural fox sets is shown in the picture. The scarf is held in place by fastening the claws together. In the muff the head is used, but tail and claws are omitted.

Two Sorts of Crepe Blouses

A plain blouse and a dressy one, both of crepe, are pictured above. They are representative styles in blouses made of crepe, which are equally well liked for daily wear and for dress occasions. Crepe Georgette is chosen for the rich-looking waist with handsome lace vest and ermine bands; while crepe de chine makes the plainer blouse for ordinary service.

The plain blouse is set on to a yoke which is narrow at the back and terminates at the front, where it is brought over the shoulder. The shoulder-seams are long and the sleeves plain and almost straight. They are set into a plain cuff with overlapping end. This end is prettily shaped into a point that is extended and decorated with a fine embroidered floral spray. A small buttonhole worked in the point fastens the cuff over a round button set on the underside.

The blouse fastens at the front with small-ball buttons. These are usually white on light-colored crepe. On tans and grays they are generally made in bright contrasting colors.

The collar is cut high at the back and turns over in two points at the front, where the embroidered flower design reappears. Many of the latest blouses are cut with high collars and others are worn with high collars or batiste net or organdie.

In the dressier waist the sleeves are full and finished with a frill of fine net and a band of ermine. The front plackets are turned back, forming revers, and a vest and high collar of heavy silk lace are set in. Small jet buttons and a band of ermine about the neck at the back and sides give a brilliant finish.

The jet buttons repeat the note of black which appears in the points of the ermine, and the lace and fur convert the blouse into a rich-looking affair conveying an atmosphere of high style.

God for the Young Child.

There is great need that mothers study the feeding of the baby, as statistics tell us that a large proportion of little people die with no chance to fight their own way before they are two years old. To introduce solid foods into the diet of a child is a change worthy of thoughtful consideration. Children should be fed according to their weight, age and development. Solid foods should be introduced gradually after one year of age in a normal baby.

A cereal well-cooked, an egg-cooked and mixed with bread crumbs or milk, or gruel, making one meal a day. See that the baby feeds slowly and masticates well. Habits of right eating may be formed now which will go with him through life. Fresh bread should never be given. Cut in squares and baked until brown, then served in milk is a good dish and one children like. Add a pinch of salt but no sugar to such dishes. Milk and cream should be used plentifully.

Creamed Finnan Haddie.—Cook half a tablespoonful of green onion, one tablespoonful of green pepper (both chopped), with a fourth of a cupful of butter, five minutes, stirring constantly. Add four tablespoonsfuls of flour mixed with a teaspoonful of salt, a dash of cayenne and half a teaspoonful of paprika. Then pour on gradually, one cupful each of milk and cream. Bring to the boiling point and cook two minutes. Reserve half a cupful of this sauce and to the remainder add 1/2 cupful of baked finnan haddie, when hot fill the center of a rice border with the finnan haddie and pour around the reserved sauce. Garnish with canned prunes.

Salmon croquettes molded around a teaspoonful of cooked green peas and served hot with a highly seasoned sauce make another tasty dish.

Salt pickrel is delicious soaked overnight or until well-freshened then placed in the oven covered with a good cupful of thick cream and allowed to bake 20 minutes. Add salt if needed, just as it is taken up.

GOOD THINGS FOR THE TABLE.

A most delightful autumn dainty is baked pears. Wash and peel the pears and lay them in a baking dish, cover with water, butter and lemon juice, using the mixture to baste them during the baking.

Serve when brown and tender. As a vegetable to serve with meats or as a dessert with whipped cream there could be nothing more tasty.

Stuffed Pears.—Take firm pears and remove cores. Steam until tender, then fill the centers with whipped cream, mixed with chopped dates, candied cherries or nuts.

Pear Salad.—Peel nice ripe pears cut in halves, remove the core then roll in chopped nuts, lay flat-side down on head lettuce; place a large spoonful of mayonnaise at the side and serve well chilled with toasted cheese crackers.

Stuffed Green Peppers.—Cut the stem ends from six green peppers, remove white fiber and seeds, scald five minutes and drain. Mix one cupful of bread crumbs with three tablespoonfuls of melted butter, one cupful of tuna fish, salt, a dash of lemon juice and stock to moisten slightly. Fill the peppers, place in a buttered pan with half a cupful of hot water to bake slowly half an hour. Serve with a cream-sauce and triangles of buttered toast.

Creamed Oysters.—Take three dozen oysters, parboil in their own liquor until they ruffle then drain. Place a cupful of cream and a half cupful of milk in double boiler. When the mixture is hot add a tablespoonful of butter and two of flour, well mixed, season with salt and pepper; cook until thick. Fill ramekins with this mixture and the oysters; cover with a piece or two of hard-cooked egg and a spoonful of buttered crumb. Brown in the oven. The egg may be used as a garnish on top of the browned crumb just as it goes to the table, with a bit of parsley as a finish.

Orange Peel and Lemon Peel may be used to flavor sauces, removing the peeling before serving.

Criticism of Modern Ways.

Today the tendency is not to endeavor to make youths strong to resist, but to try to remove all stress from them. They must not be given hard tasks at school; indeed, the cry is that children must feel that school is play. They must not be taught obedience and respect, lost they will be servile. They must have much amusement. All this is dependent upon the idea that life is meant for pleasure and that work is a curse.—Dr. Charles W. Burr.

Only Work Brings Success.

Those who are prone to consider themselves exempt from hard work have never been known to obtain the success which real people covet. You have to keep working every minute to get anywhere. Just as soon as you stop the other fellow is bound to go ahead.

Vast Consequences.

There are purposes which God himself cannot fulfill on earth except through you, and every sin of yours is a barrier set in God's way. To be sinning, not against yourself, but against the universe; in the petty yielding to your own indolence or neglect, to be a hinderer of God's great ends in the world—that is what gives awfulness to every thought of sin. To injure, blot, ruin yourself—that may be a small matter; but to hold back the vast mechanism of creation—that gives your little life significance.

The Army of Heaven

By REV. L. W. CONNELLY
Superintendent of Miss. Moody Schools

TEXT—God's host.—Gen. 32:2.

The angels compose the army of Heaven. The captain of this host of the Lord is no other than Jesus Christ, and it was he, we think, who appeared as the angel of the Lord in the Old Testament. The multitude of those who bow to his command is suggested by the fact that in the garden of Gethsemane he might have called for twelve legions of angels and they would have been given him; they are said to number ten thousand times ten thousand and thousands of thousands.

We would speak of two instances especially in which this shining host has figured.

The first has to do with the story of Jacob. He was on his way back from Haran after an exile of twenty years. Thoughts of meeting Esau on the morrow troubled him, for he was learning that "since come home to roost." How beautiful to read, "And Jacob went on his way and the angels of God met him." And when Jacob saw them, he said, "This is God's host;" and he called the name of the place Mahanaim, i.e., two hosts. The idea which he expresses is this: that while about him in his little encampment, all unprepared to meet Esau and his four hundred men of war, yet above him is God's army for his defense.

The other instance is referred to in the Thirty-fourth Psalm: "The angel of the Lord encampeth around about them that fear him, and delivereth them." This Psalm seems to have been written when David was fleeing from Saul. The night would bring its terrors for the little company which was with him, but his faith saw the mountain full of God's chariots, and expressed itself in the words we have quoted. It will be noted that he refers to the angel of the Lord who is at the head of the heavenly array, but his words include the vast multitude which camps about the saint.

In this age the question may be raised as to whether such a truth has any importance for us. Indeed some may even feel that to speak of angels put a barrier between us and God. But if we will understand that these are simply his messengers fulfilling the voice of his word, the difficulty vanishes. We have in mind a couple of incidents which show that this truth may become of vital concern in times of danger.

For example, the biographer of Mrs. John Scudder, wife of the famous missionary to India, tells of a most interesting experience in her life. With her children she was being carried through the jungle by native bearers. The tent had been pitched for the night and this frail woman with her babes was looking to her servants for protection; but an twilight descended, the roar of lions and tigers began sounding through the jungle and struck terror into the hearts of the men. One after another took flight leaving this woman and her children alone among the wild beasts. She prayed to God for protection and it was granted her. That her danger was real is shown by the fact that she heard the lions and tigers sniffling about her tent in the night; and yet no paw was raised against her, and when the morning dawned her children were sleeping in peace and safety. Her biographer suggests an explanation which is worthy of attention. He says: "There was an inner circle; for the angel of the Lord encamped around about them that fear him and delivered them."

Again this subject is suggested in the last entry found in the journal of that Christian soldier, Chinese Gordon. As is well known, he lost his life in the siege of Khartum. The reinforcements came all too late, but nevertheless the faith of this man did not fail. He says in his closing entry: "The hosts are with us—Mahanaim." It is Jacob's old word, and shows that the faith of this Christian hero realized that God had sent his angels. It is true that Gordon lost his life; but he could lay it down in the confidence that it was not because God had left him without protection, but that in the wisdom of his heavenly Father his death was permitted.

Man's Will is All His Own.

True education lies in learning to wish things to be as they actually are; it lies in learning to distinguish what is our own from what does not belong to us. But there is only one thing which is fully our own—that is our will or purpose. God, acting as a good King and a true father, has given us a will which cannot be restrained, compelled or thwarted; he has put it wholly in our power. . . . Nothing can ever force us to act against our will. If we are conquered, it is because we have willed to be so.

GETTING A START

By NATHANIEL C. FOWLER, JR.

(Copyright, 1915, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

THE SOCIAL LIFE OF BUSINESS

Business, while often hard and even cruel, does not refuse to consider the human side of life.

Thousands of captains of industries and merchant princes recognize the needs of man as well as those of trade, and encourage many forms of social intercourse among their employees, including the establishment of libraries, reading rooms, gymnasiums, and the organization of athletic and other societies.

Exhaustive experiment has shown that healthy social life can be added to business without detriment to financial profit, and that the more employees get together, play together as well as work together, the more efficient they are likely to be.

Workers of the same grade naturally have much in common, and there is no reason why they should not enjoy one another's company in business and out of it, why they should not have a common business interest and a social acquaintanceship and friendship.

Of course business must be attended to, and any social life which interferes with the conduct of business cannot very well be tolerated, but there are forms of sociability which the well-regulated store or factory should recognize, and many of them do.

Fellow employees should be friends as well as business associates. They should enjoy one another's company at work as well as out of hours.

A hearty "Good morning," an exchange of smiles, a pleasant joke, a kind word, even during the heat of business, helps to bring the strenuousness of work to a livable level and assists rather than retards the action of business.

Get acquainted with your fellow clerks. Know something of their personal life, as well as of their business.

Organize ball teams, associations for business and social betterment. Connect with the employees of similar institutions. Intermingle and interchange.

The greatest business men in the world are members of boards of trade, chambers of commerce, and other organizations. They lunch together unafraid of competition. Their principles should be emulated by the employees, who, collectively, are as strong a factor in success as are those who command them.

Let your wife come into this social and business life, if she will.

Do not draw too sharp a line between business and family.

Pass along the good things you have to others, and they will reciprocate.

The more you get together, the greater will be your accomplishment.

Remember that you alone amount to very little, that you as a part of a composite mass may hold great responsibility.

The successful man is not a hermit. He circulates rather than boards. He shakes hands with his competitors, exchanges experiences with those of similar callings. He has a normal social life, the kind that does not interfere with his business. He renders unto Caesar what is Caesar's, and does not forget there is something besides business, something which, if properly handled, will push rather than handicap trade.

"Not unless you follow the directions."

"What are the directions?"

"Keep the bottle tightly corked."

THE WORST WAY.

"What sort of yellow is Jhworth?" "Very impractical. He's the sort of man who would elect to take a sightseeing trip in a submarine."

Can't Do the Work.

"A bad back makes hard work harder. All day the dull throb and the sharp darting pains make you miserable, and there's no rest at night."

"Maybe it's your daily work that hurts the kidneys, for jarring, jolting, lifting, reaching, dampness and many other strains do weaken them."

Cure the kidneys. Use Doan's Kidney Pills. They have helped thousands and should do as well for you.

A NURIC!

The Newest Discovery in Chemistry

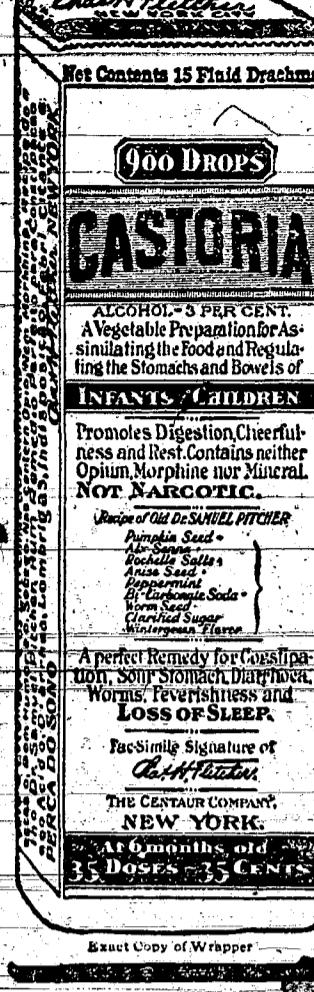

This is a recent discovery of Doctor Pierce, who is head of the Invalid Hotel and Surgical Institute at Buffalo, N.Y. Experiments at Dr. Pierce's Hospital for several years proved that there is no other eliminator of uric acid that can be compared to it. For those easily recognized symptoms of inflammation—as backache, scalding urine and frequent urination, as well as sediment in the urine, or if uric acid in the blood has caused rheumatism, it is simply wonderful how surely "Anuric" acts. The best of results are always obtained in cases of acute rheumatism in the joints, in gout and gout, and invariably the pains and stiffness which so frequently and persistently accompany the disease rapidly disappear.

Trapping the Elusive Mouse.

Every housewife has had the experience of finding a carefully prepared mouse trap devoured of its bait, but unsprung and minus its victim. This can be avoided and Mr. Mouse capture assured by using for bait cheese crumbs instead of a large lump. To get the crumbs the mouse must press down and thus set off the spring. A lump, on the other hand, is easily stolen.

GRAYLING, THURSDAY, NOV. 4

Four hundred and fifty million Chinese tremble at the menace of seven million Japanese—a giant helpless at the feet of a pygmy. Japan has a magnificent army of seasoned and disciplined veteran troops and a complete equipment of modern guns and munitions of war, while China is without the means of self defense just like Uncle Sam.

Let's make it America first last all the time, and then some.

He left the New Haven hotel held in this place in charge of Mrs. Hodges and son Irving, who will conduct same until his interests may be sold or disposed of. Mr. Hodges says that he brought a load gear in Grayling but feels that the opportunities for the future will be better in Atlanta. His intends here with him success if it is his field of operation.

About twelve young ladies, friends of Miss Malvile Ketzbeck, were very pleasantly entertained at her home last Saturday evening at a Hallowe'en party. Various games suitable to the occasion were played and several musical selections rendered by a number of the young ladies. During the evening each guest was conducted individually to the witch's cave where her hand was readily ready to "witch" and she was told what fate had in store for her. Late in the evening a delicious lunch was served by Mrs. Ketzbeck assisted by Mrs. Eno Milnes, after which the guests departed all reporting a very pleasant evening.

Died, at the home of his son in Knightstown, Ind., September 26, 1915, Renton P. Forbes, aged about eighty years. Comrade Forbes was born in Madison county, N. Y., and came to Michigan before the civil war. He was a member of Co. D, 6th Michigan cavalry, and served from Sept. 1862 to the close of the war in 1865. He was one of the early settlers in this county, having entered his homestead in Maple Forest township, where he resided until about 1881, when he came to Grayling and resumed his trade of a carpenter, which he followed, until about eight years ago when his sight so nearly failed him that he was obliged to stop work and a year or more after moved to Knightstown, Ind., where he has since resided with his son, George. He was a charter member of Marvin Post No. 240 G. A. R. of this village, and a staunch defender of the "Old Flag." An honest man, with the courage to support his convictions has gone to his reward.

Many pretty parties were given last week in honor of Hallowe'en. Among them was one given by the Misses Cassidy to the Queen's Social club last Thursday evening. The home wore an autumn air, the electric lights being red and yellow, and pumpkin jack-o'-lanterns and other symbols of Hallowe'en were scattered throughout. After the business part of the meeting, contests were in order, Miss Fedora Tetu winning the prize in a guessing contest; other contests followed. Miss Helen Reagan rendered many beautiful vocal solos, after which refreshments of pumpkin pie, etc., were served. After luncheon Margaret Cassidy as "Mother Witch" told each one's fortune. Then the lights were turned out and candles lighted and the room wore a ghostlike air and horrid stories were told by several of the guests. The members left about twelve o'clock for their homes, feeling spook-like but saying they had spent a most pleasant evening.

Make your visit short, and you will be welcome the next time.

Fur caps men's nice warm ones just arrived. Come in for early choice. Salling, Hanson Company.

CONVENTION OF TEACHERS ENDS

GREAT SAGINAW MEETING IS CLOSED WITH ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

DR. D. B. WALDO IS PRESIDENT

Many Notables Addressed Pedagogues
On War and Educational Topics.
Resolutions Are Adopted.

Saginaw—War and education competed for interest in the addresses at the closing sessions of the Michigan State Teachers Association Friday and Saturday night by David Starr Jordan, president of Leland Stanford university; P. P. Claxton, United States commissioner of education; President Harry B. Hutchins of the University of Michigan; Mary Antin, New York Congresswoman Clarence Miller, Duluth, Minn., and others.

Commissioner Claxton urged the importance of a high school education for all young people and advocated reorganization of the school course into six years of elementary work and six years of high school. This was approved by the association. He defended the large expenditures of money for school buildings and favored a plan whereby young people, who must aid in their own support could attend school and be employed, dividing their time between the two.

At the business session D. B. Waldo, president of the Western State Normal school, Kalamazoo, was unanimously chosen president.

Other officers elected are: First vice-president, Edward P. Cummings, Lansing, retiring president; second vice-president, Miss Carrie Dickie, Ann Arbor; third vice-president, N. N. Worth, principal, Kalamazoo high school; secretary, John P. Everett, Kalamazoo, re-elected; treasurer, Frank Jensen, Benton Harbor. Executive committee, Edwin L. Miller, Detroit, and E. T. Cameron, school commissioner, Isabella county.

Resolutions were adopted approving the plan to provide education at public expense for those who are obliged to leave school early, favoring the wider use of the schools in endorsing the United States government system of instructing aliens and commanding the legislature for establishing a teachers' retirement fund.

On motion of Superintendent E. Chadsey of Detroit, it was voted to appoint a committee to investigate the possibility of re-organizing the association. It is now too large to be adequately cared for by any city.

Dr. Jordan gave two addresses, one on "Lessons of the Great War" and the other on "The Pickled Half Million."

"The Pickled Half Million," Dr. Jordan said, "compose that class in any country upon which devolved the perpetuation of the race, the ones that want freedom. To keep the world's high standard of physical and mental being, the war must cease."

President Harry B. Hutchins, of the University of Michigan, addressing the college section, praised the small colleges of the state and urged their fullest co-operation with the university.

Former Congressman Diekema, of Holland, voted a plied for universal peace.

Samuel Dickie, president of Albion college, spoke in behalf of state aid for denominational colleges.

Driver of Auto Is Killed.
Lansing—Walter Phelps, 16, son of Burton A. Phelps, one of the department managers of the Reo motor car factory here, was instantly killed Sunday night in a motor car accident between Fowlerville and Webberville. Young Phelps, with three young friends, a boy and two girls, was riding in his father's car. The machine skidded in the sand and turned clear over. Phelps was pinned in such a way that his neck was broken.

The others in the party escaped with a few bruises.

Last Strike Case Settled.

Houghton—The last of the thousands of criminal cases growing out of the 1913 strike was cleared from the docket Monday, when Judge O'Brien nolle prossed cases of second degree murder against James Johnson and Emil Strang, charged with killing John LaLaita, a striker, in January, 1914.

The defendants were working miners and LaLaita an alleged Socialist.

Strang has been enjoying his liberty because he is tuberculous. Johnson has been in jail nearly two years.

The Ypsilanti high school house of representatives has voted to enter a triangular debating league with Saginaw and Detroit Central high school houses of representatives. A trophy cup will be awarded to the school that scores the highest number of points in a three years' series of debates.

Saginaw county has voted to bond for $40,000 to build its part of a trunk line highway to Owosso which will open up a thickly settled district of eastern Michigan. Under the plan a $40,000 bridge will be built over the Shiawassee river on the Merritt road and the state will pay for this.

The body of August Fisher, 63 years old, and a resident of Iron Mountain for 30 years, was found at Spread Eagle summer resort, his head hanging over the side of a rowboat. He was subject to rheumatism, and it is thought that he stood up in the boat, lost his balance and was unable to get up.

Lumber confiscated from local option law violators will not be destroyed by the Shiawassee county authorities. On recommendation of the prosecuting attorney, at the request of Superintendent Clarence Case, of the county poor farm, it will be used hereafter at the county infirmary for medicinal purposes.

The Shiawassee county road commissioners ask for only $14,000 for roads next year. The supervisors, however, will submit a bonding proposal of $200,000 next spring for roads have been built in the county during the three years, and the townships completed 18 miles during the past year.

The prosecuting attorney has been instructed by the board of supervisors of Gogebic to proceed, civilly or criminally, against many former city and township treasurers, their deputies and their bondsmen. An audit of the county books has shown that many treasurers in the last 25 years have returned as delinquent property on which the taxes were properly paid.

Attorney-General Fellows has given an opinion to the effect that prisoners may be worked on the roads in any county, whether the county road system is in force there or not. He also says that the county's half of the fees received under the new auto tax law shall be spent under the direction of the county road commissioners where the county road system obtains, and by the supervisors where it does not.

DENMARK.

The following story was told at the Copenhagen exchange: A Copenhagen business man who had made much money during the war and had rented a suite of large and splendid rooms made arrangements for giving his friends a dinner at his new home. Among other things, he wired an artist to bring paintings for 5,000 kroner for decorating the walls of the sitting room. The order was promptly filled, but the next morning the artist was told by phone to bring another batch of paintings for 5,000 kroner to fill out the gaps.

Bishop Christian Moller of Aalborg, who is seventy years old, has resigned his office. He has been much interested in public education, and he was rather liberal in religious matters.

The people's high schools of Vallkilde, Askov and Rockilde are all fifty years old. It would be difficult to exaggerate the importance of the work performed by these and other schools of the same kind in Denmark.

Eight large boats are engaged in scraping the bottom of Limfjord for oysters, and it is hoped that they will be able to get the six million oysters which are permitted to take this season. Last year only four millions were caught, because the export was stopped. This year it is expected that the price of the catch can be sold in Norway and Sweden. It was feared that the rainy weather last summer would damage the oysters, but they are found to be of a fine quality.

L. Andersen, a seaman at Bolden, has had all the fun he cares for as result of the war. Last February he was on board of an English bark of Santos South America, when that ship was captured by the German cruiser Karlsruhe, which saved the crew and sunk the ship. The Karlsruhe had the crews of four other ships on board and they were all safely landed at Buenos Aires. He did not get fat, for he had to live on rice and bread while on board the Karlsruhe. Andersen returned to England with a Norwegian ship and again hired out with an English steamer. This was soon torpedoed, but Andersen was saved. For a third time he hired out to go with an English steamer, carrying coal to Genoa, but this was also torpedoed and Andersen was taken to Glasgow. Now he wrote to his parents that he would temporarily give up the sea, for he seemed to have poor luck.

NORWAY.—The city council of Christiania recently received an anonymous letter containing $10 and the following exhortation: "To the Municipal Council of Christiania: Three years ago the practice of self-assessment was introduced and made compulsory. I did not quite understand the rules, and a more careful perusal of the laws as well as of my accounts has convinced me that I owe the municipality $110, which I enclosed forwarded. Respectfully,

Last year a shipper in Skien wanted to buy a steamer for $75,000, and he went to the bank to borrow some money on it. But he received the answer that he had paid altogether too much for it, hence the bank could not lend him only a trifling amount.

"Well," he said, "I suppose I have to pull through anyway," and he managed to keep the ship. Now the ship has paid for itself, and a dividend of 45 per cent has been returned to the owners. This is given as an instance of the ease with which money can be made by ship owners who really know their business.

The opening of the hunting season causes quite a stir in Glubrandstad. There are few deer in the mountains this fall. But 120 licenses have been taken out in the parish of Lom and 70 in Vaae. Many of the brave nimrods are bound to be disappointed. The oldest hunters who tried their luck this year were Nils Amundsen of Vaae, who is sixty-five, and Hans Grasdalsmoen of Lom, who is about seventy.

It is estimated that the population of Norway June 30, 1915, was 2,496,541.

The Norwegian steamship Tyr, loaded with cotton and bound for Copenhagen, Denmark, was captured by a German warship in the Cattegat, the arm of the North sea between Sweden and Jylland.

By a vote of 30 to 12 the city council of Skien has endorsed the petition of the amt legislature of Bratsberg to the government to prohibit the transportation of wines and whisky on the quays and docks of the Nordjord canal.

The Norwegian-American Steamship Line is still offered more business than it can take care of. A Greek steamer of 8,000 tons has just been bought and its name has been changed from Keramis to Lyngsfjord. The Lyngsfjord is taking a cargo at New York.

The following couples have celebrated their diamond weddings: Kristoffer Eriksen and wife, Christine, now Peterson, Christiania; Ole Andersen Berger and wife, nee Olise Andersen Oster, Jarlsberg, and P. Hansen and wife Ronnau, Oslo.

The supply of wood on hand in Stockholm is a little over 22,000 cords.

Two sedate and well-known citizens of Moss made a wager to enter a horse race from the canal to the market place, their horses being still more easy-going than the owners. The point at stake was which of the two could take the most time, not counting the stops. The horses knew the way, and the agreement was that the reins should be hanging loose. The judges appeared, and upon a given signal the horses began to move. The crowd was quite excited at first, but it was soon apparent that one of the horses dropped behind so fast that the other had no show, and the slow horse won out by taking 90 seconds more time than the other.

SYNOPSIS.

Juanita Holland, a Philadelphia young woman of wealth, on her journey with her guide, Good Anse Talbot, into the heart of the Cumberlands to become a teacher of the Indians, meets Bad Anse, the leader of the Hatfield-McCoy feuds at the door of Fletch McNash's cabin. While resting there she overhears a talk between Bad Anse, Hayey, chief of his clan, and Juanita's guide, Juanita has an unprofitable talk with Bad Anse and they become antagonists.

"It's Hayey," he said slowly, "but hereabouts I've got another name that's better known." He paused then added with a hardened timbre of voice, as though bent on making defiant what would otherwise sound like confession: "It's Bad Anse."

The girl recollects, as though under a physical shock, it seemed to her that every way she turned she was to meet staggering disappointments. She had spoken almost pleadingly to the man with whom she could make no terms; the man whose arrogant power and lawless influence she must break and paralyze before her own regime could stand firming room in these hills. Yet, as she looked at him standing there, and stiffened resolutely, she could say nothing except "Oh!"

Into the monosyllable crept many things: répulsion, defiance and chagrin for her mistake, and in recognition of them all the bronzed features of the man hardened a little and into the cool eye snapped a sparkle of the sleeping fires she had divined.

"I made my suggestion to the wrong man," she said steadily. "I misunderstood you. I thought you said you wanted peace."

He swung himself to the saddle again; then, as he gathered up his reins, he turned and in his utterance was immovable steadiness and glacial coldness, together with a ring of contempt and restrained anger.

"I did say that, and by God Almighty, I meant just what I said. I do want peace—in these mountains—but I ain't never found no way yet to get peace without fightin' for it."

She saw him ride away into the moonlight, with his shoulders very straight and the battered felt hat very high, and she looked neither to right nor left as he went until the mists had swallowed him.

For a long time while she sat there on the stile gazing across the steep banks between which the waters of Tribulation slipped along in a tide of tarnished quicksilver, and beyond which rose the near ridges of blue and the far, dim ridges of gray.

At her back she knew that the family and the missionary were sitting in talk.

The fat there with her hands clasped about her upturned knees as she used to sit when some childhood grief had weighed upon her.

She could not shake out of her mind the humiliation of having shown her weakest side to Bad Anse Hayey. It was some satisfaction to remember the offended, stiffening of his shoulders and the smoldering fire in his eyes. She had heard much of the strong, easily hurt pride of these mountain men—a pride which made them walk in strange surroundings with upright heads and eyes, challenging criticism of their uncouthness. She had first appealed to this man, but at least she had also stung him with her scorn. Now they would be open enemies.

She knew that this young man, in a country where every man was poor and no man a pauper, owned great tracts of land that yielded only sparse crops with the most arduous coaxing. She knew that under his rocky acres slept a great wealth of coal, and that above them grew noble and virgin forests of hardwood. The coming of railroads and "development" would make him a rich man. Yet he stood there, seemingly prizing above all those magnificent certainties the empyrean beet of feudal chivalry. Yet he was a man. With that thought came an unwelcome comparison. She thought of someone whom she had loved and sent away—and of their leave-taking. That man had had every gentle attribute which this man lacked. All that universities, travel and ancestry can give had shown out in his bearing; his manners, his voice, the expression of his eyes.

There had been a time when she had wavered in her determination to devote herself to the mission for which she had been educated. She thought that this man might be more important than any mission; that a life with him might be full enough. Then had come the discovery, which at first she had rebelliously denied, but which forced itself hatefully upon her realization. Despite his unchallengeable charm and gentility, he was, after all, not quite a man. When she had admitted that beyond dispute, she had turned, sickened, from the life which she could not contemplate without him. The man whom she thought she loved was empty and fine, like a swordless sheath. Very well, she would turn to the work of putting an edge on the sturdier metal of raw humanity.

Her grandfather's fortune, or fortunes, since the plural rather than the singular fitted their dimensions, had come to her with his wish that part of them should go to advance education in the Alleghenies. She was to be his stewardess in overseeing the work, but that she should go in person and permanently to that crude environment had not been anticipated. Those who had known her in her life of normal luxury, of dancing and playing, and of delicious rhythmic personality, would have laughed at the idea as absurdly incongruous. Of this fact the young man had heatedly reminded her on the night when she gave back his engagement ring and announced her determination.

"Juanita," he had expostulated, with a suffering of hopelessness in his eyes which she ached to comfort. "Juanita dearest, courts and juries and the bayonets of militiamen have struggled to civilize those savage people, and for a hundred years they have utterly failed. Their one god is implacable Hatred."

"I shan't go with juries or bayonets," she had retorted.

"You will go without knowing them, their way their point of view."

"I don't know them now, but I will know them."

"You haven't even a letter of introduction."

"I never heard—"her voice rang with a note against which he knew the futility of argument—that the Savior needed letters of introduction."

And so an imagined heartbreak and a crumbling world of illusions—as she fancied—had driven her suddenly into self-possessed exile and a mission.

Her education had been pointed to fitting her to oversee such work—done by the hands of others. Even then had not he and all the rest goaded her with their insistent refrain: "You can't do it?" Now she was here.

She drew herself up straight as she sat on the stile and impatiently dashed away the moisture from her eyes. If that other man had only had in him the iron-wasted on this desperado, Anse Hayey! She rose at last and went unwillingly back to the cabin.

"The 'oss," said barefooted before the fire, and talked with the missionary. The girl heard their conversation through the dullness of fatigue, wondering how she was to sleep in this pigsty, yet restrained from asking permission to retire only by her embarrassment and unfamiliarity with the native code.

At last she heard Brother Talbot assert: "It's gittin' ter be late as we've got a tolable long way ter journey tomorrow. I reckon we'd better lay down."

Juanita began counting heads. There were six in the room, and the boy Job was yet to return from the dance, and while she was still trying to work out the problem the woman pointed to a corner bed and suggested: "I reckon you'd better bundle in with Dawn."

She saw the girl crawl into bed just as she was and the missionaries.

Cal Douglas should, on a February afternoon, have shot to death his brother-in-law, Noah Watt, even if, as Cal earnestly assured the jury, he was just obnoxious to his neighbor.

Cal bore a name for surly character, and even in a land where grudge-bearing is a religion he was deemed ultra-fanatical in fanning the flame of hate upon a bed of illness.

It was an unfortunate thing that Cal Douglas should, on a February afternoon, have shot to death his brother-in-law, Noah Watt, even if, as Cal earnestly assured the jury, he was just obnoxious to his neighbor.

Cal bore a name for surly character, and even in a land where grudge-bearing is a religion he was deemed ultra-fanatical in fanning the flame of hate upon a bed of illness.

Cal Douglas' son, Noah Watt's woman, an air as much alike as two peas in a pod, went neighborhood pronouncement: "They all both soured on mankind an' they glories in human misery."

Had the fight on that winter evening ended in the death of both participants, McBrairs and Haves would alike have called it a gentle riddance and dropped the matter where it stood. But since a Hayey had slain a McBrainer and the Hayey still lived it could not, in honor, be so dropped. It left an uneven score.

Since the mountaineer has little to do in the winter and spring save gossip, the affair grew in importance with rehearsing, and to each telling was added new features. It was significantly pointed out east of the ridge that Noah had incurred the displeasure of Bad Anse Hayey by the suspicion of tale-bearing to old Milt McBrainer. It was argued that the particular wife-beating which led to the tragedy might have passed as uneventfully as several similar episodes heretofore.

She could see that Fletch McNash had half risen in his bed. His head was party turned in an attitude of intent listening, and his pose was as rigid as that of a bird dog frozen on a point. It had all been momentary, and as Juanita gazed she saw other figures stir uneasily, though no one spoke. The missionary lay still, but the woman's figure moved restlessly beneath the heaped-up comforter.

So for a few moments the strange and tense tableau held, and the girl, watching the householder's alert yet motionless pose, remembered him as he had hunched drunkenly over his plate a few hours ago. The two pictures were hard to reconcile.

Then, at some warning—which her less acute ears failed to register, she saw Fletch McNash's right hand sweep outward toward the wall and come up gripping the rifle.

Still there was no word, but the eldest boy's head had risen from the pallet.

Keyed now to concert pitch, the girl held her body rigid, and through half-closed lids looked across the dim room. While she was so staring and pretending to sleep, there drifted from a long way off an insistent, animal-like yell with a peculiar quaver in its final note. She did not know that it was the famous McBrainer railing cry, and that trouble inevitably followed.

It is related in the history of the Hatfield-McCoy feud, which burst out between neighbors over a stray pig, and claimed its toll of lives through half a century, that one of the Hatfield girls wrote on a white pillar at the front of her often bereaved house: "There is no place like home." The sequel tells that a cynical traveler passing that way reflected on the anals of that dwelling and added in postscript: "Leastways not this side of hell."

The story of the Hatfield-McCoy feud is in many ways that of other "wars" which have made of the rocky eastern divide a land beset with leaguers and unique.

In the war between the Haves and the McBrairs there was more than the forgotten episode of a stray razorback which was not surrendered to its lawful owners. They had for decades hated and killed each other with a fidelity of bitterness that made all their truces and intermarriages fail of permanent peace.

Between the territories where they had originally settled stretched a barrier of hills broken by only one gap. The McBrairs had made their first habitation east of that ridge and gap where the waters ran toward the sea. The Haves had set up their power to the west, where the creeks and springs fed the rivers that went down to the Blue Grass and to Tennessee. Had the two clans been content to remain respectively on the sunrise and sunset slopes of the backbone, they might never have clashed, but there were bright-eyed women to the west and east. Feminine Hayey lured McBrair suitors, and McBrair girls seemed to the Hayey men worth any dare that fate might set. So it has been since young Montagues and Capulets ignored deadlines and long before. Smoke went up from cabins on both sides that housed men and women of both clans. Hatred seared and set up new points of infection all along Tribulation and beyond its waterfalls.

The man of the sandy hair was Breck Hayey, next to Bad Anse the most influential leader of the clan. His influence here in Peril made or unmade the officers of the law.

When these two men came together as opposing witnesses in a homicide case, the air was fraught with elements of storm.

"That's a brawlin'," commented a native, glancing at the quietly seated figures one noon. "An' them fellers air in their bunks."

CHAPTER IV.

Physical exhaustion will finally tell, even over such handicaps as a mountain feather bed and the fumes of a backwoods cabin.

If Juanita Holland did not at last actually fall asleep, she drifted into a sort of nightmare coma from which she awoke with a start.

Finally she fell again into that half sleep which dreams of wakefulness. It may have lasted minutes or hours, but suddenly she roused again with a start from a new nightmare and lay trembling under the oppression of a poignant foreboding. What was it that she had subconsciously heard or imagined? She was painfully wide awake in the slumbering cabin. At last she was sure of a sound; low but instinct with warning.

Beardog was growling just outside the door.

Then, violently and without the pretense of gradual approach—precisely as though horsemen had sprung from the earth—there clattered and beat past the front of the cabin a streaked thunder of wildly galloping hoofs and a rattle of scattered rocks. She felt an uncanny freezing of her marrow.

Horses travel perilous and broken roads in that fashion only when their riders are in wild haste.

As abruptly as the trumpet had come it died again into silence, and there was no dimming of hoofbeats.

Receding into distance, the thing was weird and ghostly. She had not noticed in the weariness of her arrival at the cabin that the road ran deep in sand to the corner of the fence and that after fifty yards of rough and broken rock it fell away again into another sound muffling stretch. She could see that Fletch McNash had come it died again into silence, and there was no dimming of hoofbeats.

She could see that Fletch McNash had come it died again into silence, and there was no dimming of hoofbeats.

Receding into distance, the thing was weird and ghostly. She had not noticed in the weariness of her arrival at the cabin that the road ran deep in sand to the corner of the fence and that after fifty yards of rough and broken rock it fell away again into another sound muffling stretch. She could see that Fletch McNash had come it died again into silence, and there was no dimming of hoofbeats.

fast in the wake of its sounding. She knew only that it fitted in with her childhood's conception of the Indian's warwhoop. But she did know that in an instant after it had been born along the wind she had seen a thing happen which she would have disbelieved had she heard it from the lips of a narrator.

She saw in one breathing space the half-raised figure of Fletch McNash under the quilt of his bed, Miss Anne Walton being afraid that the goblins would get her, invited ten of her young lady friends to the home of her sister, Mrs. Claude Keppert on Saturday evening to help keep the spooks away. The house was cleverly decorated with festoons of paper, pumpkins and witches and the lights were dimmed with crepe paper. But the spirit of old time witchery was entirely overcome by an interesting game of hearts. Miss Anne Fisher succeeded in getting the fewest number and so won the prize. A delicious lunch was served by Mrs. Keppert assisted by Mrs. Chas. Caulfield. On the corner of the table was a placard from beneath the plateau the girls drew their fortunes and were amazed to find that the fates had planned quite a different future from what they had dreamt. On leaving, the girls expressed themselves as having had a fine evening and hoping that their hostess had been saved from the dreaded ghosts.

Miss Margaret Insey entertained with a Hallowe'en party, Friday evening, which was one of the most enjoyable affairs that has been given by the younger set. It was indeed a fantastic looking crowd when the thirty-two girls and boys had all arrived masked and dressed in costume. There were fairies and witches and Charley Chaplin etc. The house had been decorated with pumpkins, black cats and witches, so that the very atmosphere of it seemed spookish. On arriving each guest was asked to register and was given a number by which they were identified. Then everyone was given a pencil and paper to write down the names of as many guests as they recognized. Miss Louise Salling had the largest number correct and received the prize. Another amusement was drawing slips of paper upon which had been written some stunt to perform. There were many clever actors in their line but Owen Cameron was judged as the best and so received the prize. There was not a lull during the whole evening from the time the jolly company arrived until they departed. Mrs. Insey served the guests with a delicious Hallowe'en supper which was indeed a fine way for these young people to spend their Hallowe'en evening.

The "buy it at home" fever is spreading. Have you it yet?

The "King Quality" Mackinaws are best in every way. Grayling Merc. Co.

While crossing the Michigan Central railroad at the Portage lake road crossing Tuesday, a new Buick Six auto owned and driven by Dr. Stanley N. Insey, was struck by a switch engine, the left side of the auto being stove in and running gear twisted out of shape. The rear right wheel was stripped to the hub and in fact the car was rendered practically ready for the scrap heap. Then a miraculous escape: The Doctor was uninjured, except for a bad shaking up and a few bruises. Riding on the front end was Charles Preston, switch man and he was pinned between the engine and auto, breaking his right leg in two places. The crossing in this place, at the time of the accident, was blocked up with box cars that were about twenty feet nearer the center of the street than the law allows and made it impossible to see an approaching train. The crossing watchman gave the signal to come ahead and as the auto reached the fifth car track the collision occurred. The engine was running slow and as soon as the engineer saw the danger reversed the levers, perhaps thus avoiding one or more crashes. Dr. Insey feels that he is lucky to be here. Mr. Preston was taken to the hospital where the fracture was reduced by Dr. Keppert and later taken to his home. He is getting along nicely except for the severe pain from his injury.

DuPont News Items.

Supt. Foster of the DuPont Co. spent Sunday with his family at Bay City.

Steam was put on the boilers at the DuPont plant last Saturday and the large whistle sounded, which made some noise.

Several of the DuPont boys paid their families a visit at Bay City over Sunday returning Monday morning.

Mr. Tarry of the Badger Co., who is installing the apparatus in the Still house here for the DuPont Co., left last Friday for Bay City, Delaware and other parts in the east.

Some of the pumps and the generator at the plant were started up Wednesday of this week, but proved to work very satisfactorily.

The concrete work at the plant will be practically completed this week. Also a good share of the other outside work, and the pipe and steam fitting is being rushed with a large force of men.

The eleven houses built by the DuPont Co. are nearly completed one is already occupied by Paul Ford and Mr. Foster expects to move into his in a couple of weeks.

Mr. C. T. Clark and Mr. C. H. Hudson of Bay City arrived in the city Wednesday for a short stay. Mr. Hodgson is to be the chemist at the plant here when operations begin.

A Very Good Suggestion.

A Young Men's Christian association suggests that the man who must drink have his wife buy a supply and send the stuff to him. It adds: "Should you live ten years and continue to buy booze from her, and then die with snakes in your boots, she will have money enough to bury you decently, educate your children, buy a house and lot, marry a decent man and quit thinking about you entirely."
